Childhood Memories

The charm of childhood is unforgettable. The childhood days are more precious and leave an everlasting impression on one's life. Those days are full of fun and innocent pleasure.

I was the youngest son of my parents. So, they loved me very much. I was carefree and without any worries at all. I had a lovely friend in my childhood days, we were in the same class, we often recited aloud from our books, and we shared many things in common such as playing, dancing freely and chatting aimlessly. We used to play together and enjoy that. Everything was then so simple, innocent and wonderful. We made paper boats on rainy days and my mother helped us float them in the rainwater. We also collected flowers, caught beautiful butterflies and enjoyed our activities very much. We were then afraid of going into the dark as we believed ghosts roamed in the darkness.

My school days were the best days of my life. I still remember my first day at school. I can still feel how warmly I was welcomed. The affection I received from my teachers, especially my teacher of Arabic who inspired me, and the love I had from my classmates will never be forgotten.

My childhood memories are still haunting my mind and I wish they would return again in my life.
